The Stage

A recital presented in the Clearfield Area High School auditorium Saturday, Nov. 15, by Roman Totenberg, violinist, and his Ensemble under the sponsorship of the Clearfield Community Concert Association. Included in the Ensemble are: Oscar Ravina, violin; Samuel Marder, viola; Endel Kotam, viola; Marjorie Neal, cello; Raymond Hanson, piano; Susanne Felman, flute; Stephen Petkoff, clarinet; and Leslee Brown, bass.

The 1958-'59 Clearfield Community Concert series got off to an auspicious start Saturday night with an attraction that future artists will find difficult to top—either in musicianship or in audience response.

The crowd of about 600 persons, including members of Community Concert Associations in nearby towns, came away from the concert praising the music of Mr. Totenberg and his young musicians, as "excellent," "brilliant" and "some of the best I have ever heard."

The Ensemble was composed of the largest number of instrumentalists ever presented by the local Concert Association but the dent it put in its budget was well justified. It resulted in an evening of rare music for this year's members and should be a real selling point in coming membership drives.

As leader and solo violinist for the Ensemble, Mr. Totenberg more than lived up to the reputation he has gained on both sides of the Atlantic—that of being one of the most distinguished violinists of his day. Playing one of the great Stradivarius instruments—the 1734 "Ames" violin, his music was a satisfying treat to the ear. In the past, the Clearfield Community Concert Association has shied away from signing violinists, but there should be no more hesitation if artists of Mr. Totenberg's calibre are available. He drew new and beautiful sounds from the instrument and probably made every member of his large audience a violin lover.

In such a beautifully done program, it is difficult to pick out any outstanding numbers. But perhaps among the best received by the audience were "Introduction and Allegro" by Ravel which featured piano, string quartet, flute and clarinet; and Saint-Saens' "Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso."

Mr. Totenberg, an artist of long standing, was born in Poland and studied under Georges Enesco and Carl Flesch and was a protégé of the Polish composer, Karol Szymanowski. He has appeared as soloist with leading symphony orchestras in both Europe and the United States. Presently he is a member of the faculty and director of the Aspen Institute in Colorado.

New Debate

Dr. David Donald, a Columbia University historian, told the opening session of the conference Sunday night that the epitaph of the Confederacy in the Civil War should read, "Died of Democracy."

The collapse of the Confederacy came because the Confederate people insisted on keeping their democratic freedoms in wartime," he said.

He told the conference that during the war the Confederate states and their citizens championed civil liberties while the North, operating under war pressure, cast aside a number of basic civil liberties in the quest for victory.

"For example," Donald noted, "no Southern newspapers were closed by the government during the war, regardless of what they printed. But in the North more than 300 newspapers, critical of the Lincoln administration, were suspended and more than 15,000 persons were held in prison without ever having a hearing or a trial."

"The Union government ruthlessly suppressed civil liberties in its effort to win the war," Donald said.

Democrats Divided

They said Supreme Court decisions, such as that outlawing school segregation, are "part of the law of the land." But they rejected the use of force in segregation matters.

Virginia's Thomas H. Blanton and Arkansas' Tom Harper say they think the party went far enough in 1956. They indicated they would accept a similar statement.

New Hampshire's J. Murray Devine came out for a compromise with the South.

"I believe in a moderate approach to the problem," he said. "You can't legislate this sort of thing. If we push it too fast we might destroy not only the Democratic party but the whole country."

William L. Coleman, Ohio chairman, said "I never saw any problem of this sort which couldn't be solved if everyone concerned was determined to sit down and solve it. . . . I believe the Democratic party is big enough to work it out."

Indiana Chairman Charles E. Skillern said he favors a moderate civil rights plank. He suggested it might outline a program of integration starting in the lowest school grades and gradually working up.

counts of the more than 2,500 school districts in Pennsylvania. But McBride said the final say on legal opinions for state officials.

The big problem facing Smith, should he receive the authorization, is how to finance the audits. His appropriation for the current biennium totaled $280,000—far short of what would be needed for an extensive school auditing program.

"I fully expect to place into the budget for the 1956-51 biennium provision for funds to properly conduct the audit program here under consideration," Smith said.

The 1957 Legislature made a $200,000 appropriation to the Public Instruction Department for local school audits. However, the department still has to get this program fully operative.

trois before agreeing to ban tests U.S. Atomic Energy Commissioner Willard F. Libby disclosed in a radio-TV interview from Washington Sunday night that the United States is making plans for future nuclear weapons tests in case the Geneva talks break down.

He denied a Russian charge that the United States is stalling to gain time to prepare for another series of tests.

The United States and Britain have suspended their tests since Oct. 31, while the talks are on, and urged the Soviet Union to do likewise. But detection apparatus showed the Soviets set off two shots on Nov. 1 and Nov. 3.

The technical conference on prevention of surprise attack is just as tightly deadlocked.

The Soviet Union, with the backing of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Romania and Albania, has sought to transform this 10-nation technical conference into a political forum for airing a wide range of cold war and disarmament issues.

The representatives of the 10 countries were to meet again today without even an order of business and with little immediate prospect of agreeing on one.
